Overall, students felt that both instructors were good, but with different teaching styles.

Wortley was praised for being very organized, enthusiastic and humorous. He presented material in a clear, articulate and concise manner. However, students felt his tests required too much memorization of specific details and did not reflect material learned in class. Students did appreciate his use of visual aids and examples to explain the material.

Doob was very knowledgeable and provided a lot of useful information in classes. However, students felt he needed more structure and organization in his lectures. He had trouble conveying the material in an interesting manner. Students did feel that his tests were fairer and tested their understanding of material. Also, his guest lecturers were well-received by students.

Students loved Young and agreed he was an "excellent" instructor - one of the best they'd ever had at University. He was praised for being highly enthusiastic and giving interesting, informative and engaging lectures. He communicated his wealth of knowledge very clearly to ensure students' understanding. However, some students did say that at times, he talked very fast.

Students were upset that, for an introductory course, the essay required a lot of effort and was worth too much at 40%. A few also felt that, sometimes, expectations for assignments were ambiguous - this was further hindered by the fact that the TAs were not very helpful.

Learn Exp	13	11	16	47	5	2	2	3.4

Students generally did not like the instructor and the course. Cardamore was unorganized and very unaccommodating to students' needs. She did not provide her contact information, which made it difficult for students to relate to her any concerns they had. The tests did not reflect any of the material taught in class. Students had to rely very heavily on the books to be able to write the tests.

230 WOODSWORTH COLLEGE

Fitzgibbon was very helpful in answering students' questions. He explained material clearly and gave many relevant examples.

Thomlinson was really enthusiastic, answered questions well, and lectured clearly and effectively.

A very useful, enjoyable and terrific course!
