Bolduc was described as organized and knowledgeable. The course however, was criticized based on the inconsistency arising from too many instructors with each having different expectations.

Mastromonaco was cheerful and enthusiastic in her work. Students felt that the use of more exercises and visual aids would have been helpful.

The course was said to be challenging and tests were not always representative of material used in texts. Students would have liked to see more consistency between instructors and TAs.

Bolduc was enthusiastic. The class size was too big which took away from the language practice. The class was also described as very demanding: lots of work and a high expectation of French language prior to beginning the course. Many students felt the L2 section was not helpful and could have been spent more effectively to help improve students' performance and weaknesses.

Pagan was an excellent instructor who expressed great enthusiasm towards the subject. Her classes were both interesting and enjoyable. Her use of summary sheets in addition to the textbook made learning the grammar much easier.

Some students thought that the grammar lessons were taught at too fast a pace. The class was little too big, and not everyone was able to fit in the computer lab.
