Most students enjoyed Marujo's lectures. However, a few of them complained of a heavy workload and the instructor's frequent use of unfamiliar Portuguese words. Because the course was a beginner one, students expected that it would have been taught at a slower pace. The instructor was deemed as enthusiastic and approachable, thus students found the course interesting.

Instructor(s): M. Marujo

Marujo's students concurred that this class had a heavy workload. A few felt that the instructor spoke too quickly in class and did not always make an effort to see whether students understood the concepts. Generally, however, Marujo was regarded as a very enthusiastic instructor - a characteristic that helped students enjoyed the class more.
