Some students were not satisfied with Watts' performance and felt that he was too monotone and lacked enthusiasm. Students felt his slides were not very useful, and noted that he was not clear about major concepts and ideas.

Overall, students were very pleased with Lehman's teaching style and found the enthusiasm and passion behind the material very engaging. Students thought that Lehman communicated well. Some students wished that textbook assigned readings should have been more specific in this section.

Regarding the course, many students felt that the evaluation of the course should have involved tests that were section-specific, not just one test at the end of both sections. Students also felt that more assignments would have been beneficial. Students also wanted regular tutorials and more instruction for the essay assignment.

Kalmar was engaging and helpful to students. He used examples that kept students interested and showed passion for the material. Students wished that the slides had been posted online and wanted tutorials. This would have assisted the students who felt that the information was scattered or confusing.

Some students felt that Jermyn was not clear about her expectations. Also they commented that she read from her notes and did not engage the students. Students wished that supplementary lecture material and notes were posted online. Students felt that the value of course readings this term was low. They widely expressed a desire for tutorials in this course. A few students also suggested that the course be split into two half-courses (Bio ANT/ARCH and Soc Cult/Linguistics).

ANT 200Y1Y Introduction to Archaeology

Learn Exp	1	2	6	34	24	15	10	4.8

Chazan was a very enthusiastic, knowledgeable and good lecturer, but at times a little disorganized. The course covered very interesting topics, and had a good overview of Archaeology. The lectures needed more detailed slides, and some students questioned the value of the tutorials. The workload was heavy at times, but overall, a good course.

ANT 203Y1Y Human Biology & Evolution

Instructor(s): D. Begun

Enr: 184	Resp: 105							Retake: 80%

Learn Exp	0	4	3	40	23	15	12	4.8

Many felt that Begun was a good instructor. They said he explained things clearly with lots of examples. At the same time, they felt that the tutorials were not very useful and many of the TAs were ill-prepared. Some students felt that the quizzes were not an accurate reflection of the information reviewed in lectures - and some of the questions were rather ambiguous.

Learn Exp	0	1	3	16	28	25	25	5.5

Jermyn performed well as lecturer and seemed to be very passionate about what she taught. Her marking scheme was considered hard and too strict at times.

Some students considered the course difficult, as there was a great deal of reading. With that being said, the majority of students enjoyed the lectures and found it opened their eyes to a number of anthropological topics.

Difficulty	0	0	0	26	33	33	5	5.2
Learn Exp	0	2	2	34	29	23	8	5.0

Students found that Begun was passionate about the material. This course was very fast-paced, with a text that was found to be too complicated. Students would have benefitted from a full-year, rather than half-year. The workload was high; assignments were too time-consuming, and tests were difficult. There was poor communication between the instructor and the TAs and the labs lacked structure.

ANT 333Y1Y Living Primate Adaptations

Learn Exp	0	0	0	13	29	37	18	5.6

Kurki was knowledgeable and showed enthusiasm in teaching. Her lecture slides were organized very well and she outlined requirements and course goals effectively. Overall, students were very impressed with Kurki's teaching style and ability to answer questions.

Students found that the labs were well-structured and organized, and also found the bell-ringer style tests challenging. Some students did not feel that this was an effective method of testing and did not feel that it was reflective of the material learned. Students were pleased with the TA's performance and enjoyed the course overall.

The course was a great combination of teaching and discussion on interesting content. This was a fantastic course with a lot of class participation, although may be challenging for those without any previous knowledge. The workload and the amount of reading was heavy, but the feedback concerning the course material was excellent.

Ginter went through lectures quickly as there was a lot of material to cover in one hour. Students expressed frustration that the lecture slides were not posted. The instructor depended on the textbook for lecture material, but was not consistent with all the terminology.

Students were generally displeased with the weighting of assignments for the amount of work required to complete them. The course load was intensive for a half-credit. The student discussion labs were enjoyable, but generally the fossil labs were more useful in learning the material. Students found the workload to be too much and requirements were not clear. Students were pleased with the TA's performance.

Students were very impressed with Kurki's performance and enjoyed her enthusiasm in the material. She was always approachable and available to students to answer questions. Work was graded with very good constructive comments.

Students enjoyed the course material, but felt that weighting of assignments was uneven, and thought the weekly readings were heavy. The focus of the course seemed to be on methods of learning, not on learning relevant bioarchaeological material. Students felt that a practical lab component of the course would have been beneficial.
