Students greatly enjoyed Kalmar and his enthusiasm for the subject matter. They found his lectures engaging and informative. Her preparation for tests was thorough and her assigned readings greatly enhanced students' understanding of the subject matter. Students loved his portion of the course.

Students found the subject matter in Boddy's section of the course dry and the lecture material not very interesting. Some students felt that Boddy needed to be more engaging in her presentation of lectures, which tended to drag. They also suggested she use Powerpoint slides to present her lecture material.

Students found the material and Chazan's enthusiasm for archaeology and the specific topics covered engaging and exciting. Some students felt the lectures went by too quickly and that posting the slides on blackboard would have been helpful. Most students enjoyed the assignments and the creativity they allowed, but some felt the assignments were unevenly distributed between the terms and marks were too long in coming. Although most students enjoyed Chazan's lecture style, some found him a bit unorganized or distractable at times.

The majority of students described Pfeiffer as enthusiastic and interesting. However, the majority were very critical of the content of the class, as well of the communication. Students complained that the communication between Pfeiffer and the TAs was not sufficient such that the presentation of content in the labs and tutorials did not correlate appropriately with the lecture content. Also, the marking was harsh in comparison to the clarity of the assignments and content was not explicitly covered. Students believed that the course had great potential but was not properly exercised.

Students really enjoyed Turner's teaching style and thought he was passionate, very knowledgeable and enthusiastic. The lectures were always interesting and very informative.

The major complaints were: 1) there were no grades given prior to the drop date, and 2) the essay, that was worth too much at 70% and the final test - worth 30% were both due on the same day.

Learn Exp	8	0	25	25	33	8	0	4.0

Most students enjoyed the overall topic of the course, and thought Pfeiffer was very enthusiastic and knowledgeable about the material. However, there was an issue with the lecture material not being full explained in the time allotted; labs and tutorials would have been appreciated. There was also a lack of hands-on activity, in a class that would have benefitted from it immensely, as it dealt with the physical aspects of pathology. The testing methods were found to be unclear and not representative of the lecture material, and focussed much more on the textbook, which many found to be dense and hard to understand.
